REFOSCO DAL PEDUNCOLO ROSSO RONCO DEI MORERI

Name	The wine's name comes from the vineyard's position. Ronco in Friulano language refers to a section on the hill and moreri to the mulberries that surround the vineyard. The Refosco varietal, considered one of our most interesting native red grapes, is characterized by a balance between structure and elegance
Appellation	IGT Venezia Giulia
Production Area	Village of Farra d'Isonzo in the Collio DOC. Elevation: 80 meters (263 feet) above sea level
Grape Varietal	100% Refosco dal Peduncolo Rosso. This very old varietal, that originally came from the area between Carso and Istria, has been documented as growing in Venezia Giulia since 1467
Type of Soil	The Collio's hilly terrain, formed during the Eocene period, is composed of layers of sandstone and loam rock (limestone and clay) that were once the ocean floor. Today the sea, which is about twenty kilometers (12 miles) away, and the nearby Alps send afternoon breezes over the vineyards, cooling the grapes after a warm day of sun. Proximity to mountains and sea, along with the mineral-rich but poor soils, create the ideal situation for producing complex, well-structured wines that are very age- worthy. These soils are impermeable so rainwater flows off the surface, producing little erosion and preventing standing water
Vine Training System	Guyot
Harvest	All hand picked in mid October
Plant Yield	About 0.90 kilograms (about 2 pounds) per plant
Winemaking	After destemming, the grapes underwent maceration in large stainless steel vats, and were delicately pressed to maintain their varietal flavors and aromas
Aging	The wine aged in large and small oak casks for twelve months. After bottling, the wine aged in the cellar for approximately six months
Tasting notes	It has a deep red color with light garnet tones. The nose is both intense and intriguing. Fresh and fruity, its fragrance is reminiscent of ripe raspberries and wild blackberries. In the mouth, the wine has a robust fruitiness, bursting with berries. The finish is long and lingering
Bottle Sizes	750 ml – 1,5 liters
